

Acknowledgements

Many hands were involved in carving out this book, and I am grateful to everyone involved. The authors each have a short acknowledgements section at the beginning of their respective articles. Besides the people who helped my co-authors, others provided general background support, which brought the book to life.

Firstly, I thank the institutional environments that allowed our research endeavours to develop and flourish: the Department of Anthropology at the University of Brasília, the Institute for Peace and Conflict Studies at the National University of East Timor (Universidade Nacional Timor Lorosa'e) and the Brazilian and East Timorese governments and their respective diplomatic representation in Dili and Brasília.

Recognition is also due to the Coordination for the Improvement of Higher Education Personnel (Coordenação de Aperfeiçoamento de Pessoal de Nível Superior – CAPES), the Brazilian National Council for Scientific and Technological Development (Conselho Nacional de Desenvolvimento Científico e Tecnológico – CNPq) and the Federal District Research Foundation (Fundação de Apoio a Pesquisa do Distrito Federal – FAP-DF).

Anthropologists are absolutely dependent on their interlocutors' generosity and knowledge to develop their work. I am deeply grateful for the learning opportunities provided by East Timorese institutions and people to the authors of these chapters. Without each of you none of these analyses would be possible. For the valuable partnership with Professor Antero Benedito da Silva and the continuous help of Diogo Freitas da Silva I say a heartfelt obrigado barak!

Emma Coupland's brilliant professional performance copy-editing was the key to having this book published in English. Since we began working together, I call her my English-queries angel. I also greatly appreciate the help of Leticia Cesarino on many chapters.

Daniel Simião provided important technical and emotional support to carry out the internship project, from which the book stems.

Last but not least, I give thanks to the students and colleagues who bravely accepted the challenge to embark on the Timorese adventure with me and whose works are presented here.
